SCHMITZMIX CONCRETE PROJECT GALLERIES

Colored-Textured Concrete Entrance Courtyard

Attached garages (and their accompanying driveways) often shift the initial focus of visitors, pedestrians, and drivers from a home's front door to its overhead garage door ... normally not the most inviting view.

Working in concert with dormers, stone masonry walls and veneer, a covered front porch, and a series of wood arbors, the colored-textured concrete entrance courtyard of this Port Washington home directs the initial focus away from the garage and toward the front door, creating a sense of welcoming anticipation before guests and family members enter the home. Seasonal plantings, hanging baskets, and container flowers will soften the scene, while adding color and life to this always inviting entrance way.
